The Palace at Holyroodhouse is The Queen's official Scottish residence and home to The Queen's Gallery collections of royal art. The Palace has long been home to successive monarchs throughout Scotland's turbulent past, including Mary, Queen of Scots. The magnificent grounds also include the ruins of the 12th-century Holyrood Abbey.

Holyrood, the new home of the Scottish Parliament was designed by architect Enric Miralles to appear "sitting in the land." A walk around the outside reveals many of the building's famous stylistic features including the Debating Chamber, the MSP building and Tower Buildings. Inside, visitors can access the public galleries and café with guided tours of the Debating and Committee Chambers available on non-business days.
